NEW MEMBER APPLICATION INFORMATION PACK AND FORM

1. Introduction

Business Unity South Africa (BUSA) was formed in October 2003 and began operating in January 2004. This created the first representative and unified organisation for business in South Africa. Today, through its extensive membership base, BUSA represents the private sector being the largest federation of business organisations in terms of GDP and employment contribution.

BUSA is a non-profit company representing cross-cutting organised business interests in South Africa. BUSA consists of approximately 50 organisational members representing unisectorals; corporate representative organisations; chambers of commerce & industry; and professional organisations. There are also circa 20 direct corporate members constituting a Board of Trustees.

As the apex organised business entity representing South African business, BUSA is the formally recognised representative of Business at the National Economic Development and Labour Council (NEDLAC). At NEDLAC, business interacts with various government departments, organised labour and the community constituency across a variety of NEDLAC structures. BUSA also represents business on bilateral processes and in the Presidential Business Working Groups. BUSA and many of its members participate in the CEO Initiative. BUSA serves as a social partner in the national policy development and social dialogue process and nominates representatives to sit on statutory and advisory bodies on behalf of business. Through BUSA, members are able to participate in cross-cutting issues of interest to all of business.

Internationally, BUSA represents SA business in the SADC Private Sector Forum, the SADC Business Council, the BRICS Business Council, Business Africa, B20 and the International Organisation of Employers (IOE). Through the BUSA network, members have access to participate in these regional and international fora.

BUSA's work is largely focused around influencing policy and legislative development for an enabling environment for inclusive growth and employment. BUSA operates through two standing committees: namely Economic Policy and Social Policy. Standing subcommittees include:

- Environment
- Energy
- Tax
- Trade
- Education & Skills Development.

Both Policy Committees have a cross cutting focus on transformation, small business, as well as regulatory certainty and impact. This, however, does not constitute an exhaustive list of policy priority areas that BUSA covers. As a member-driven organisation, BUSA represents the cross-sectoral perspective of matters brought to its agenda by its collective membership.
